NEW YORK (CNNMoney)

It was another record-setting day on Wall Street. This time, the Dow closed above 15,000 for the first time ever. The broad index gained 0.5% to end at 1,625.96.

Investors also pushed the S&P 500 to a new record. The index gained 0.5% to end at 1,625.96.

Related: 20 biggest stock gainers

The stock euphoria didn't touch the Nasdaq. The tech-heavy index ticked up just 0.1% after wafting on either side of the breakeven line for much of the day.

Stocks have had a remarkable run this year, with all three indexes logging gains of 14% to 15% so far.

Click here for more on stocks, bonds, currencies and commodities

Corporate earnings dominate: Shares of DirecTV (DTV, Fortune 500) popped, after the company reported better-than-expected earnings.

Molson Coors Brewing (TAP), meanwhile, reported sales and profits that fell short of forecasts.

First Solar's (FSLR) stock plunged, after the company missed earnings estimates.

Tesla's (TSLA) stock dropped, after CEO Elon Musk said a self-driving Tesla car is still several years from production.

OfficeMax (OMX, Fortune 500) widely missed earnings forecasts and said revenue this year would come in below estimates. At the same time, the office supply company issued a special dividend of $1.50 a share.

Also, Walt Disney Company (DIS, Fortune 500) inked a deal with Electronic Arts (EA) to co-develop Star games. Reporting after the bell, Disney beat earnings and revenue estimates.
Shares of Whole Foods (WFM, Fortune 500) soared in aftermarket trading, after the supermarket store beat estimates.

Kraft spin-off Mondelez (MDLZ) didn't fare as well after hours. Its profits dipped, but shares still rose slightly.

Related: Fear & Greed Index edging toward extreme greed

European markets closed higher, driven by strong results from financial firms Societe Generale (SCGLF) and European markets closed higher, driven by strong results from financial firms Societe Generale (SCGLF) and Asian markets ended higher. The Shanghai Composite increased 0.2% and the Hang Seng added 0.6%. The Nikkei close above the 14,000 point barrier as traders returned after a holiday.

First Published: May 7, 2013: 9:44 AM ET